

25X1

SECRET

major role in facilitating the coordination of national intelligence on narcotics within the Intelligence Community, and with relevant law enforcement and policy agencies. He is recognized by senior government officials as a true expert in the field of international narcotics.

15. Two psychologists in the Office of Medical Services devoted long hours after their normal workdays to meet an urgent need of the Agency to produce results of the PATB tests more promptly. The normal time between which an applicant completed the PATB test and the written narrative report was available to the Office of Personnel was about 15 days. These psychologists, with the help of many other employees in OMS, were able to devise a computer program which could convert the numerical PATB scores into narrative data virtually instantaneously. They achieved this through determination, trial and error, hard work and drawing on their extensive professional expertise. This computer program was brought to operational status and now processes PATB tests in three days. This has played a critical role in significantly reducing the time it takes to bring new employees on duty with the Agency.

25X1

19. Last term the Supreme Court handed down a critical opinion affecting CIA's operations. In the case of Sims v. CIA, the Court ruled that the DCI must have broad authority to protect intelligence sources and methods from the risk of compelled disclosure. The Court recognized the vital

25X1

SECRET